Our group's answer is.....

The reasons on why the demand on spice are so high because the spices are quite valuable, most of the spices are imported from out side of Europe. Spices could be used in many different thing like making perfume the spices could help add some more aroma into it spices could help season food and other stuff

And during the Plage the prices for a citrin spice got very expensive because it was thought that it could help cure the disease, the spices that was thought to be able to cure the disease was nutmeg

Thank You!
